

WHEN THE RULE OF LAW DISAPPEARS: WHAT CAN BE LEARNED FROM THE REST OF THE WORLD?

David Frum

Staff Writer, The Atlantic
Former Speechwriter to U.S.
President George W. Bush

Biography:

With over a million followers online worldwide, David Frum is the voice many Canadians and Americans turn to when looking for current political insight. Whether it is the latest foreign policy debate or the inner workings of the White House, David Frum offers refreshing and clear insights of complicated issues of the day. He provides fascinating insight into what political outcomes mean for specific audiences around the world in addressing geo-political issues or global and international affairs. He is currently a staff writer at The Atlantic, where he also hosts a weekly video podcast, The David Frum Show. He's also a regular contributor to The Hub, a digital media platform focused on Canadian policy and governance. David is the author or coauthor of ten books, including two New York Times bestsellers.

As a speaker, David has the rare ability to engage audiences at a deeper level: that of their belief systems. Even if you do not agree with his views, David's encyclopedic knowledge of hot topic issues is unmatched. Audiences appreciate his thought-provoking style and ability to boil complex subjects into digestible bites and within the context of other events and history. David's deeply researched and thoughtful talks in storytelling style are also laugh-out-loud funny. In a world dividing into angry trading blocs, David has been an unwavering voice for free markets, open international trade, and the defense of democracy against authoritarian threats. Non-partisan and equally at home discussing Canadian, American, and global issues, David brings engagement and information to every audience he addresses.

David Frum has been active in Republican politics since the first Reagan campaign of 1980. From 2014 through 2017, Frum served as chairman of the board of trustees of the leading UK center-right think tank, Policy Exchange. In 2001-2002, he served as speechwriter and special assistant to President George W. Bush.

David holds a BA and MA in History from Yale and a Law degree from Harvard, where he served as President of the Federalist Society. He and his wife Danielle Crittenden Frum live in Washington DC and Wellington, Ontario.

A captivating and thought-provoking speaker, David engages audiences with his vast knowledge, insightful analysis, and witty delivery, offering a unique blend of rational and engaging perspectives that leave a lasting impression.